TEAM Rocket 10

EDITOR'S NOTE

Team Rocket Strikes Again!

That trembling trio of trouble, better known as Team Rocket, snuck into the printing plant the night before the Team Rocket cards were printed and messed up several of them. A total of six different cards have been spotted with errors. Dark Arbok #2 and #19 have the wrong copyright dates (1999-23000) at the bottom, Dark Rapidash #44 has the word "Length" missing from the measurements, and Dark Vileplume #30 has Fighting listed as the Weakness instead of Fire. On Grimer #57 the Poison Gas attack's effect is supposed to be Poison and not Asleep, Dark Dragonite's holographic card #5 was also printed as a non-holo card, and Dark Raichu's reminder text says "Put Raichu on the Basic Pokémon" but should read "Put Dark Raichu on the Basic Pokémon." Wizards of the Coast has already changed the Dark Arbok, Dark Rapidash and Dark Dragonite cards. The other cards will remain the same. For the values of these cards please turn to our price guide on page 45.

Are you putting together a set of Team Rocket cards for your collection? If you are, you can see pictures of every card including Dark Raichu in our Team Rocket Spotlight on page 10. And, if you'd like to win an entire unopened box of First Edition Team Rocket Pokémon cards, which includes many of the error cards, turn to our contest on page 35.

One of the most popular and most desired Pokémon cards is the Ancient Mew Promo. When the card was first released it contained an error. The card had Nintendo spelled incorrectly "Nintendo". The card's error was caught quickly and corrected. The error version now sells upwards of $125. Inside this issue we're going to make one Pokémon fan very happy. We're giving away the valuable Ancient Mew (Error) card in a contest on page 44.

For those of you who are thinking about buying the new Pokémon Trading Card Game for Game Boy, our video game expert has a review of it on page 6. If you've already purchased or play-tested this new game, let us know what you think of it. How does it compare to the actual Trading Card Game? We'll include some of your comments in an upcoming issue.

We also included another Digimon Bonus section in this issue. Beginning on page 72 you'll be able to find out what's hot in Digimon, view fact sheets on the Digidestined kids and their Digimon pals, and enter a contest to win a complete set of First Edition Series One Digimon gaming cards.

There's a lot more Pokémon and Digimon excitement awaiting you inside this issue. ✨

Enjoy!

WHITE BORDERED MEIJI

I found some 98 Meiji cards with white inner borders surrounding the purple borders. A few other collectors claim that these are rare. What have you found out about these cards?

Dave Phelps
Westbrook, Connecticut

We've seen these cards for sale, but there haven't been any significant price differences. Only a couple of dealers have been selling them at 10 to 20 percent higher than our high column listings. If you're into variations then this might be a real challenge to collect them all.

RAPIDASH JUNGLE ERROR

Rather than saying, "Put Rapidash on the Basic Pokémon", my Unlimited Jungle Edition Rapidash card reads, "Put Rapidash on the Stage 1 Card". I know what it should say but, none of my other evolved cards have this error. Did they correct this mistake?

Melissa Marenfeld, age 14
Whitestone, New York

Great Catch Melissa! This is an error that Wizards of the Coast did not correct. Therefore, there are no variations and no price differences.

WHERE IS MEOWTH AND MEWTWO?

I was playing my Pokémon Game Boy game and I wanted to know which games have Meowth and Mewtwo in them.

Tessany Hager, age 11
Henderson, Kentucky

Meowth can only be found in the Pokémon Blue, while Mewtwo is in Red, Blue and yellow games.

WHO'S STRONGER?

My brother and I keep arguing over who would win a battle. It's Squirtle, Wartortle and Blastoise vs. Charmander, Charmeleon and Charizard. I think the Fire Pokémon would win because Charizard is the king.

Tanail Davis
Grand Rapids, Michigan

The Water squad has some powerful attacks such as Bite, Skull Bash and Hydro Pump. The Fire gang is also very strong with Scratch, Flamethrower and Fire Spin attacks. It would certainly be a close battle.

JAPANESE PACKS

How come every time I buy a Japanese Pokémon pack I get a holographic? When I buy an American pack I don't always find one.

Tim Reiter, age 10
Streamwood, Illinois

Every Japanese Pokémon pack except for the Base Series contains a holographic card. Media Factory, manufacturers of the Japanese cards, wanted to make every Pokémon pack special by including a holographic in each one. However, Wizards of the Coast releases holographic cards in one out of every three packs. This makes the American holographics more of a challenge to find and more valuable too.

WHO'S MARIRU?

In one of your issues you mentioned a Japanese Pokémon called Mariru, also known as Pikablu. Can you tell me which monster this is?

Randy Ott, Age 9
Mandeville, Louisiana

*Mariru is the Japanese name for Marowak #183. When Marowak was first spotted on a Pokémon card, collectors thought it looked a lot like Pikachu. Collectors then began calling this Pokémon Pikablu. Upcoming TV episodes also refer to this Pokémon as Marrow. **

The Ultimate Pokémon TCG Adventure

Pokémon card battles can now be won on the Game Boy video game system.

Okay, everyone knows that Pokémon is an exciting and fun-filled series of video games. There's Pokémon Red, Blue and Yellow for the Game Boy (Color), plus Pokémon Snap and Pokémon Stadium for the N64. There's also a collectible trading card game from Wizards of the Coast that allows gamers to collect and trade individual cards as they build up their decks in preparation to play the card game itself.

Well, Nintendo has teamed up with Wizards of the Coast to create Pokémon: Trading Card Game (SRP: $29.95), a new video game for the Game Boy. This strategy/role-playing game combines the adventure of the popular Pokémon video games with the strategy of the trading card game. It also includes recreations of over 200 of your favorite Pokémon Trading Cards (plus new cards) that appear on the Game Boy's screen.

Even if you haven't yet mastered how to play the Pokémon Trading Card Game, this video game offers step-by-step directions that'll guide you through the video game adaptation of the card game. You'll learn how to play the game itself, build and manage decks and then participate in duels with other players (or computer controlled opponents).

Using the optional Game Link Cable (sold separately) or the Infra-Red port on the Game Boy Color, two Game Boys can be linked up so players can compete against each other and trade virtual Pokémon cards. If you have the optional Game Boy Printer, you can also print out specific Pokémon cards.

In addition to being a faithful adaptation of the card game, Pokémon: Trading Card Game for the Game Boy also offers a story. When you start playing, your quest to become a Master Pokémon Trainer begins. Your journey will take you to eight card dueling clubs. Within each club, you'll come face-to-face with a Club Master. By beating each of these masters, you'll earn the opportunity to face four Pokémon Grand Masters. Only by beating the Grand Masters will you inherit the extremely rare Legendary Pokémon Cards.

Pokémon: Trading Card Game works with the regular Game Boy (and Game Boy Pocket) system. If you want to check out this game in full-color, you'll need to experience it on a Game Boy Color system.

UNDERSTANDING THE GAME

As you begin playing Pokémon: Trading Card Game, you'll need to understand the layout of the regular Pokémon trading cards (from Wizards of the Coast). These cards are recreated on the Game Boy's screen. For example, when it comes to Basic Pokémon cards, printed on each card is a type of Pokémon (its name), it's HP, evolution stage, type, level, specific data about that Pokémon, information about its strengths, weaknesses, it's expansion symbol, the Pokémon Power possessed by the Pokémon, its resistance and its retreat cost. There's also a picture of the featured Pokémon displayed on each card.

The information you'll find on a Pokémon trading card is broken up into several screens worth of data when you play a game on the Game Boy. During the game you can press the Start button on the Game Boy for a detailed explanation of a card.

Part of mastering the trading card game is learning how to properly build decks of Pokémon cards. As you're learning to play, however, practice decks are provided. Once you get started, you'll learn about energy, attacking, retreating, evolving Pokémon, using Pokémon Power, ending your turns, and the basics of winning and losing duels.

For example, before you can begin doing anything, your deck must include Energy cards. These cards allow Pokémon to attack or retreat. There are seven (7) different types of Energy cards (Grass, Fire, Water, Lightning, Psychic, Fighting and Colorless). Specific types of Pokémon require specific types of Energy cards. Part of understanding this game involves knowing which types of Pokémon requires which type of Energy.

CARD BATTLE STRATEGY

When participating in a battle, Pokémon damage their opponents by attacking them. To launch an attack (depending on the strength), requires one or more Energy cards. In some situations, you can mix and match Energy cards in order to make a Pokémon launch a certain type of attack.

1 Just like in the video games, in the middle of a battle, a Pokémon trainer can decide to give one of his or her Pokémon a rest and bring out another Pokémon. To do this, the Retreat command is used when playing Pokémon: Trading Card Game. Before you can order a Pokémon to Retreat, however, you need a certain amount of Energy (depending on the type of Pokémon).

2 As you begin to experience this video game adaptation of the card game, keep in mind there are three different types of Pokémon cards - Basic Pokémon, Stage 1 Pokémon and Stage 2 Pokémon. It's possible to help your Basic Pokémon evolve into more powerful Pokémon. Likewise, as you experience a battle, you can often take advantage of a Pokémon's special abilities. These are called Pokémon Powers. Just as there are 151 types of Pokémon, there are many different Pokémon Powers. Information about what Pokémon Powers a specific Pokémon has is displayed on each Basic Pokémon card.

Pokémon: Trading Card Game is a turn-based strategy game. This means you launch your attack, then your opponent launches their attack. If your Pokémon doesn't have enough energy to launch an attack or if it's been 'paralyzed' or put to 'sleep', you'll have to skip your turn.

SAMPLE GAME AND PROMO CARD

3 Once you learn the basic rules behind Pokémon: Trading Card Game, one of the game's characters, Dr. Mason, will walk you through a sample game. Each player draws seven cards and then chooses a Basic Pokémon (to be the Active Pokémon) who gets placed in the arena. Once a Pokémon is in the arena, up to five Basic Pokémon can be placed on the Bench.

The next step involves placing the Prizes and then tossing a coin to determine which player gets the first turn. If you win the coin toss and get to go first, select a card from the deck. Next, determine whether or not you can launch an attack, based on the Active Pokémon you selected and the number of Energy cards currently in your hand. If you have the right cards available, attach the Energy cards to your Active Pokémon card and launch an attack. Your opponent will then have their turn.

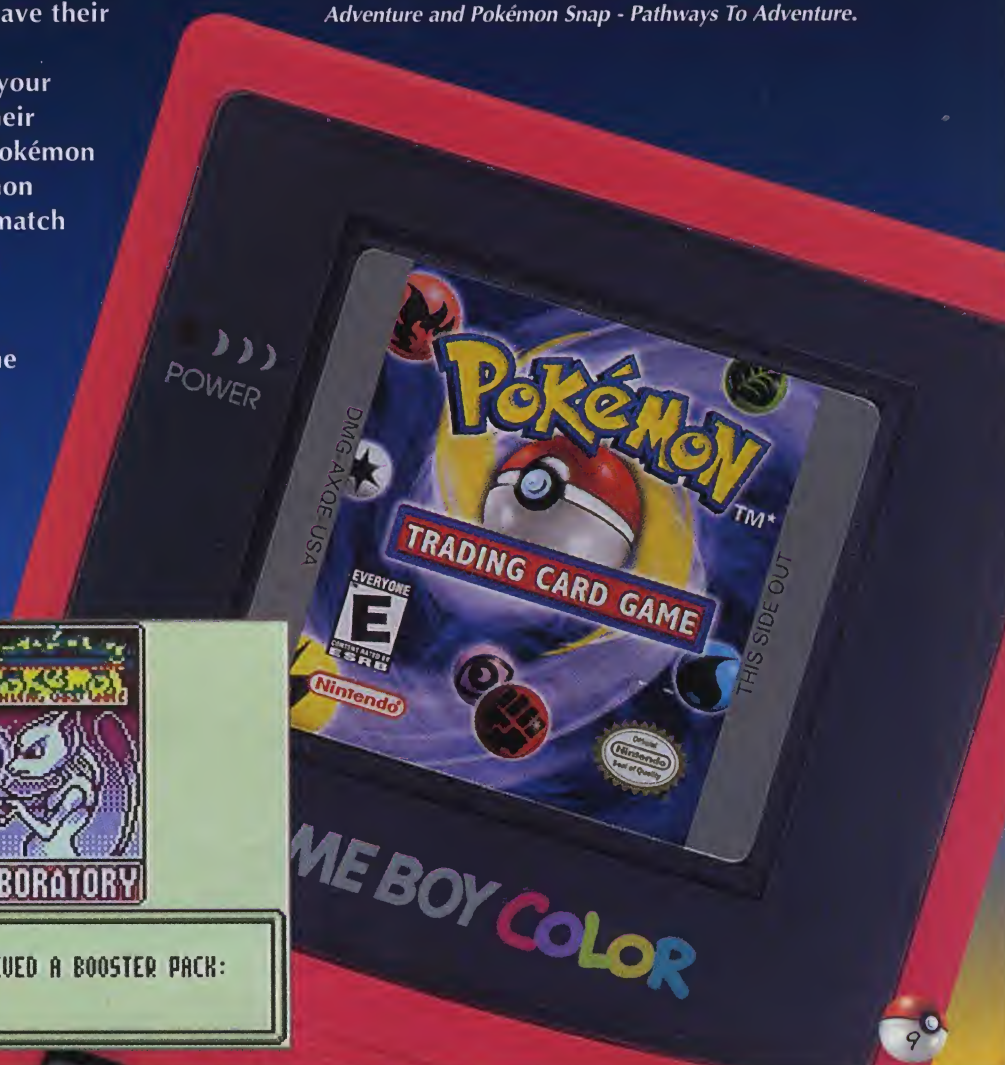

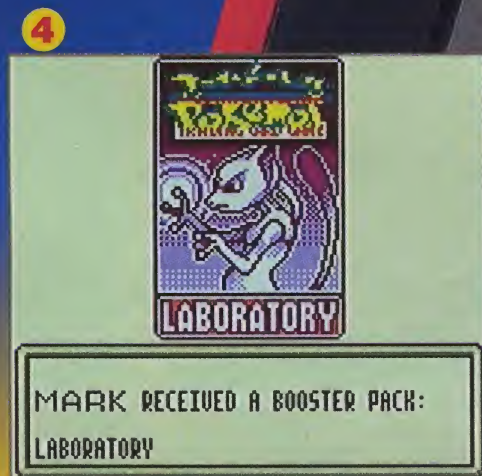

4 Take turns attacking your opponent and receiving their attacks until either your Pokémon or your opponent's Pokémon faints. The winner of the match wins the Prize card(s). As you'll quickly discover, Pokémon: Trading Card Game is very much like the actual card game, except the graphics on the Game Boy's screen aren't as flashy as what you'll find on the actual cards from Wizards of the Coast.

If you're a Pokémaniac and have been wanting to learn how to play the Trading Card Game, or you're looking for opponents to play the Trading Card Game with, this video game is exactly what you've been waiting for. The best part is you can play anytime against a computer controller opponent. And, if you're a Pokémon card collector, each copy of Pokémon: Trading Card Game comes with a limited edition Meowth Pokémon Promo card from Wizards of the Coast.

To learn more about this video game, check out the Pokémon Web site at <http://www.pokemon.com>. You can visit the Wizards of the Coast Pokémon Trading Card Game site at <http://www.wizards.com/pokemon> and discover strategies for mastering this game. ★

HOW TO DRAW POKÉMON TRAINING

#150 Mewtwo

Step 1: Roughly sketch a stick figure of the basic action in the drawing. The two large circles indicate Mewtwo's head and lower body. Use simple lines to show the direction of the arms and legs.

Step 2: The use of ovals forms the size and mass of various body parts. Note how the collection of various oval sizes and shapes already begin to look like Mewtwo's figure.

Step 3: Add in the figure's details and try to avoid too many curved lines at this stage. After the structure of the figure has been drawn with straight lines, you can change them to curves that are more accurate and realistic. (See final drawing.)

Pokémon Sea Adventure

- WRONKER - 2000

Illustration by Eytan Wronker

By Steven Diamond

the PUZZLER

“Feed My Fire” vs. “Mental Waves:”

One Prize, One Chance to Win!

Most Pokémon players consider themselves lucky if they own one Charizard. But today you're playing against Francine, the "Fire Queen," proud owner of two Charizards. Even worse, she really knows how to use them and has created a very competitive Pokémon deck she calls "Feed My Fire" built around Charizard's "Fire Spin" attack. You're playing your Psychic-Water deck, "Mental Waves," featuring Alakazam, Gengar, and a few Water type Pokémon. It's been a long hot battle, and you and Francine are each down to your last Prize card - whoever knocks out the next Pokémon wins.

But it won't be easy for you. Francine has a fully powered Charizard on her bench, just waiting for the chance to toast one of your monsters for the win. All she needs is an Energy card to retreat the Chansey (a.k.a the Big Egg) and move in her Flame Pokémon for the barbecue. It'll be hard to knock out any of her beasties. She has a couple of big damage-absorbing Pokémon out front: happy-go-lucky Chansey still has 70 HP left, and Lickitung also has room for another 70 HP. Worst of all,

Charizard is unscathed - the Flame Beast has its full 120 HP.

You're in a difficult spot. A couple turns ago, Francine used Lickitung to attack Kadabra with "Supersonic." She flipped a coin, got "heads" and left your Psi Pokémon "Confused" (that's why it's upside down in the illustration). She also added a fourth Fire Energy to Charizard - Ouch! On your turn you used a Gust of Wind Trainer to send Lickitung back to the Bench and had Francine promote Chansey - without any Energies under him, Chansey is no threat. On Francine's last turn she couldn't find an Energy to retreat Chansey, otherwise it would be all over for you. It's your turn, and you finally draw your own playmaker Pokémon, Alakazam!

Here's what's in your hand:

1 Psychic Energy
1 Water Energy
Energy Retrieval
Item Finder

PlusPower
Kingler
Alakazam

But even Alakazam can't stand up to Charizard's "Fire Spin" attack. However, looking through all the cards in your hand, you do see a way to win. It's going to take a good deal of card manipulation and the creative use of Pokémon Powers. But as a Master of Psychic Pokémon, you stare into your crystal ball to see the future and find yourself winning this turn! (You also see Francine changing her deck ... HAH!).

How are you going to do this, Pokémon Master?

Solution:

- 1) Evolve Kadabra to Alakazam, which ends the condition of Confusion.
- 2) Pay for retreating Alakazam by discarding the three Psychic Energies attached to the Psi Guy and promote your humble little Krabby as your Active Pokémon.
- 3) Evolve Krabby to Kingler and attach a Water Energy to the Pincer Pokémon.
- 4) Attach a PlusPower to Kingler.
- 5) Use Gengar's Pokémon Power, Curse, to move

1 damage counter from Chansey or Lickitung to Charizard.

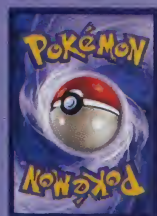

6) Use Alakazam's Pokémon Power, Damage Swap, to move a total of 5 damage counters from your own Pokémon to Kingler (for example, move 4 from Gengar and 1 from Alakazam).

7) Use your Item Finder to retrieve the Gust of Wind from your discard pile (pay for it by discarding the Psychic Energy and the Energy Retrieval from your hand).

8) Use Gust of Wind to force your opponent to retreat Chansey and promote her Charizard.

9) Stand back and watch your little Pincer Pokémon take on the mighty Charizard and win! Call on Kingler's Flail attack, which does 10 damage for each damage counter on Kingler. Kingler's Flail attack causes $5 \times 10 = 50$ damage. This attack is worth 100 damage to Charizard, who has a weakness to Water-type Pokémon attacks. Then add another 10 damage for the PlusPower you wisely attached, so Kingler's total attack is worth 110 damage. Added to the 10 damage you Cursed onto the Flame Pokémon earlier, that's enough to douse even the mighty Charizard! And, by the way, you win! ✨

POKÉMON vs. DRAGONBALL Z

#68 MACHOP

Illustration by Bill Alger

By Steven Diamond

Dark Pokémon bring an assortment of new powers to the game.

Pokémon Powers have always been awesome aids in building winning TCG decks. Blastoise's Rain Dance power and Alakazam's Damage Swap attacks have inspired tournament-winning archetype decks designed to use those abilities to their fullest potential. Venusaur's Energy Trans, Aerodactyl's Prehistoric Power, and Muk's Toxic Gas are other famous examples of potent Pokémon Powers with far-reaching effects.

Now comes Team Rocket with a whole new set of Basic and Dark Pokémon with assorted weird and wonderful Pokémon Powers. The latest expansion from Wizards of the Coast brings us fourteen all-new never-been-seen Pokémon Powers, more than any previous set. Let's sort out the real winners from the less-than-inspiring also-rans.

One important point to remember: all Pokémon Powers are turned off if the Pokémon is Asleep, Confused, or Paralyzed. This is a good strategic note to remember if you're suddenly faced with a particularly nasty Pokémon Power.

PERSONAL-USE POWERS!

The majority of Pokémon Powers focus on giving your own Pokémon great advantage or finding a way to buff up your team. Team Rocket's new dynamic duo, Dark Dragonair and Dark Dragonite, work together to pull the Pokémon you need from your deck. Once during your turn, Dark Dragonair's Evolutionary Light power allows you to search your deck for any Evolution card and put it in your hand. This is a powerful way to ensure you can make an evolution when you need it. When you play Dark Dragonite from your hand, its Summon Minions power allows you to search your deck for up to two Basic Pokémon to put on your Bench. This will help you either pull the right Pokémon for battle (once you see your opponent's weakness) or find a Basic Pokémon to match an Evolution in your hand.

Dark Kadabra's Matter Exchange power is one of the best around. Once during your turn you may discard a card from your hand to draw one from your deck. Since it doesn't count as your attack, your turn continues, giving you good card drawing advantage. The Dark Psi Pokémon's Mind Shock attack is great as well, with two Psychic Energy providing 30 damage regardless of your opponent's resistance.

Finally, while Dark Slowbro's Fickle attack is just too unreliable for my tastes (heads does 40 damage, tails does nothing), its Reel In power could be a real game-saver. When you play the Dark Hermitcrab Pokémon from your hand, you may retrieve up to three Basic or Evolution Pokémon from your discard pile and put them in your hand. Ever wish you could get back your favorite game-winning Pokémon that got knocked out early? Then make friends with Dark Slowbro.

Up!

POWERS TO PUMMEL YOUR OPPONENT'S POKÉMON

Fossil Muk's Toxic Gas Pokémon Power is one of the sure-fire ways to stymie Blastoise's Rain Dance or Alakazam's Damage Swap powers. Team Rocket's Dark Muk offers another new power, Sticky Goo. As long as this Dark Sludge Pokémon is your Active Pokémon, your opponent must pay an additional two Energies to retreat his Pokémon. Dark Muk is a great addition to any Grass deck that seeks to lock-down your opponent's Pokémon. Suddenly, Pokémon with zero retreat cost like Rapidash, Scyther, Gastly and Haunter, cost 2 Energies to retreat.

Continuing with the idea of lock-down on your opponent's Pokémon, Dark Dugtrio will make your opponent nervous about retreating his own Active Pokémon. The Dark Mole's Sinkhole power makes your opponent flip a coin whenever retreating his Pokémon. If heads, the retreat happens without further effect. If tails, the retreating Pokémon takes on 20 damage.

Despite its low 50 HP, Dark Golbat offers both a neat little Pokémon Power and a flexible attack. Dark Bat 'Mon has a Sneak Attack power that allows you to throw 10 damage on any of your opponent's Pokémon when you play it from your hand. As a follow-on, Dark Golbat's Flitter attack lets you do 20 damage to any one of your opponent's Pokémon while ignoring weakness or resistance. It's own zero cost retreat is a plus too.

Dark Primeape offers a strong attack with its Pokémon Power called Frenzy. If the Pig Monkey Pokémon does any damage (even to itself) while it's Confused, it does an additional 30 damage. Since Dark Primeape's Frenzied Attack does 40 damage but leaves it Confused, on your next turn you have a Confused Pig Monkey ready to do either 70 damage to its opponent (if you flip heads) or 50 damage to itself (if you flip tails). Remember the rules. When your Active Pokémon is Confused and its attack fails, your Active Pokémon takes on 20 damage.

Two other Team Rocket Pokémon come with either-or powers that depend on coin flips. Dark Gloom's Pollen Stench lets you toss a coin once during your turn. If heads your opponent's Defending Pokémon is Confused, but if tails your own Active Pokémon is Confused. Team Rocket's Drowzee has a Long-Distance Hypnosis power that you can use once during your turn by flipping a coin. If heads the Defending Pokémon is Asleep, but if tails your own active Pokémon is Asleep.

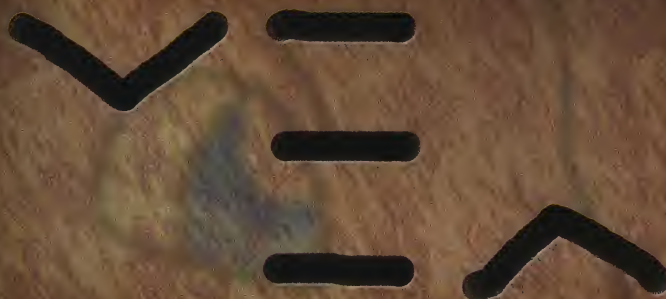

PERVASIVE POKÉMON POWERS

Last but definitely not least comes Dark Vileplume with its Hay Fever power, which simply states: "No Trainer cards can be played." To use this Pokémon Power as part of your deck strategy you have to design a deck that isn't too dependent on Trainers. This power will affect you and your opponent. But just imagine the effect on all those Rain Dance decks that depend on Pokémon Breeders for quick evolutions to Blastoise. How about those Haymaker decks that rely on Energy Removals, Bills, Professor Oaks or PlusPowers for energy denial, speed and beat-down? If you're meta-gaming and realize everyone around you is addicted to Trainers for card manipulation, speed, and quick evolutions, the Dark Flower Pokémon's Hay Fever power will leave them gasping for air.

While the Pokémon of TV Team Rocket may be our favorite perennial losers, the new batch of Team Rocket TCG cards contain enough powers from the Dark Side to make even Darth Maul grin. Team Rocket may finally be winners! ✨

The Secrets of Evolution

The ABC's of Team Rocket

By Steven Diamond

Just when you finally mastered the finer points of Pokémon Base sets 1 and 2, Jungle and Fossil expansions, and various promo cards, here comes Team Rocket with a horde of fantastic pocket monsters including new powers and new attacks! It's time to head back to Beckett's School of Pokémon Evolutions, where the learning never stops. First let's reveal some of Team Rocket's darkest evolutionary secrets.

Dark Secret #1.

All Dark Pokémon begin life as non-dark Basic Pokémon. For example, you may evolve either Base Abra or Team Rocket Abra to Team Rocket Dark Kadabra. You could also evolve either of these Basic Pokémon to Base Kadabra. In other words, when they're little, Basic Pokémon can evolve in either direction - their future is up to you, the Trainer.

Dark Secret #2.

Evolutions that turn to the "dark side" and become Dark Pokémon must continue to evolve as Dark Pokémon. For example, once your Base set Squirtle evolves to Dark Wartortle, there's no turning back - it's destined to become a Dark Blastoise someday. Similarly, after a Base Squirtle evolves to Base Wartortle, it loses the potential for becoming a Dark Blastoise.

Dark Secret #3.

When it comes to building your deck, a Dark Pokémon is considered to be a different monster from its Base, Jungle or Fossil cousin. As you know, you may only have a maximum of four of any one Pokémon (Basic or Evolution) in your deck. But you could have four Base set Charizards and four Dark Charizards in the same (very expensive) deck, since the two versions are counted as different Pokémon. But you could not have four Base set Charmanders and four Team Rocket Charmanders in one deck, since a Charmander is a Charmander.

Now for some head-to-head comparisons - start taking notes, we're talking some serious Pokémon strategy here!

Team Rocket's Psychic Attack!

The Damage Swap deck archetype has always depended on Alakazam's Pokémon Power for manipulating and removing damage done to your team, but it has one serious weakness. The Base set Abra's low 30 HP makes it a sitting duck. Team Rocket's Abra starts off enjoying 40 HP and has a new defensive attack, Vanish, that lets you discard all damage and cards attached to Abra and put them back in your deck. Team Rocket Abra is the winner in this face-off.

Team Rocket's Dark Kadabra has a lower 50

HP compared to Base set Kadabra's 60 HP, but Dark Kadabra has two excellent new abilities. Its Pokémon Power, Matter Exchange, allows you to discard a card from your hand in order to draw one from your deck. Its Mind Shock attack does 30 damage regardless of the Defending Pokémon's resistance. Mind Shock will be a rude awakening for Pokémon like Chansey and Dragonair that have always enjoyed a resistance to Psychic attacks. Two thumbs up for Dark Kadabra.

Finally we come to Alakazam versus Dark Alakazam - and who wins this contest really depends on the strategy of your deck. If your goal is to get Damage

Swap going, Base set Alakazam is the only way to go. But Team Rocket's Dark Alakazam is a pretty impressive power hitter for your Psychic team. Its first attack, Teleport Blast, does 30 damage and gives you the option of immediately switching Dark Alakazam with one of your Benched Pokémon following the attack. This move will leave your opponent crying, "Hit and run!"

Dark Alakazam's second attack, Mind Shock, delivers 40 damage regardless of the Defending Pokémon's resistance. If you're looking for more aggressive Psychic Pokémon, Team Rocket's Dark Psi Guys are for you.

Team Rocket's Turtles Blast Off!

With the game-breaking Rain Dance power to lay down unlimited Water Energies every turn, Base set Blastoise is another superstar of the Pokémon scene. However, Base set Squirtle has always been an easy target with its low 40 HP. A couple of hits from Electabuzz and it's all over.

Team Rocket's Squirtle boasts 50 HP, making the new tiny turtle easier to keep alive to evolve. Team Rocket's Squirtle also has a decent Shell Attack with 20 damage for two Colorless Energy. Team Rocket wins this round!

Neither Base Wartortle nor Dark Wartortle are too exciting. Base Wartortle enjoys a slight edge with 70 HP over Dark Wartortle's 60 HP, but the Base version's first attack, Withdraw, is useful only for defense. Base Wartortle does have a decent second attack, Bite, causing 40 damage, but most Pokémon Masters are really aiming for Blastoise and a Pokémon Breeder can get them there faster. Dark Wartortle's first attack is Doubleslap. With a maximum of 20 damage, Dark Wartortle is awfully weak for a 1st stage evolution. Its second attack, Mirror Shell, only works if your opponent attacks Dark Wartortle. Your choice depends on your strategy. If you want to do a rain dance, Base Wartortle (and a few Breeders) will join your team. If you want to include Dark Blastoise in your game plan, you'll include Dark Wartortle in case one of those Pokémon Breeders doesn't show up in time.

As if the old Blastoise wasn't scary enough, Team Rocket's Dark Blastoise gives Water decks yet another weapon. Base set Blastoise "Hydro Pump" attack can dish out 60 damage by attaching 5 Water Energies. However, since you can include both Base Blastoise and Dark Blastoise in a single deck, consider adding the Team Rocket version as well. Skip Dark Wartortle and evolve one of your Squirtles directly to Dark Blastoise with a Pokémon Breeder. With four Water Energies attached, Dark Blastoise's Hydrocannon attack can lay out 70 damage. That's more damage for less energy than Base Blastoise Hydro Pump attack. The dark and light turtle twins are going to be laying down some hurting, trust me.

Hey, they may be the bad guys, but Team Rocket really rocks! ✨
